Last evening the Bennett-Moulton company opened its ebraggement in this city, presetting "The Grand Duchesa." This is a Hvely opera, ta lof bright, eatchy music and stirring action. The speaking parts and dialogue are witty and quite new, so that in all it was a charming novelty. There was a large audience, the house being crowded to the doors. The company has been seen here in the past several times, and each time there has been an improvement over previous work. This year there has been a long forward stride, and cons dering the low prices of admission the work is as near perfection as could be expected.

A London paper prints the following condribution calling attention to the serious consequences of ill treating horses. "Three horses died in a mouth in a six ble and the verdict of the veterinary surgeon in each case was that they died from inflammation of the bowels. The fact that the three were all inder the charge of one groom led to inquiry and it was found that the man was in the habit of kicking them in the belly on the slight est pretext. A change was made and no further losses resulted.

We wonder how many deaths proceed each year from kindred causes. When we see horses, that have signs of breeding about them relegated to carts and going about their work with sprained tondons, the feet slipping around at each step—when we see eart bouses in like predicament—we are led to ask how many of these and the like allments are caused by the injudicious use of the whip.
